CHOTEAU ACANTHA CHOTEAU, MONTANA

From the Crow's Nest

The most successful NRA Finals rodeo is behind us, culminating a full year's work by a number of people, not the least of whom include manager, George Runquist and the promoter, Bob Teaff, who collaborated to insure that everyone in and around the Billings trade area knew about the rodeo. Also contributing to the rodeo's huge success was the weatherman who brought above normal temperatures and below normal precipitation to Montana. Add to all of these factors the top stock and the top cowboys from across the state and you have crowd-pleasing performances. Thanks to all who contributed to the success of the NRA Finals.

This issue contains all the news from that rodeo, plus pictures of the contestants, plus another feature which proved a little harder to compile; the standings of the NRA since 1960 and a history. We would be more than happy to publish similar records of the Montana Rodeo Association if any of our readers have this information.

If you were one of the lucky award winners, do not neglect to send the donor of that award a letter of appreciation and thank you. The Northern Rodeo Association depends on its generous supporters, and cowboys need not be so smug as to think they will continue to be generous without so much as a "thank you." So take a few minutes out of your busy schedules and drop them a line.

Time to look ahead to the coming rodeo season. Your 1984 dues are due anytime. A mere $60 entitles you to compete in the world's largest rodeo association. Send those dues in now. And while you are doing so, make sure you continue to be informed of all the rodeo news by keeping us informed of your current address. The mailing permit we use to get the news to you does not allow your newsletter to be forwarded, if you should move or the post office changes your address. Please let us know immediately if your address changes. Others who have complained their newsletter isn't reaching them may rest assured we are attempting to find out exactly why. The U.S. Postal Service, although the most efficient and best in the world, does, at times, leave much to be desired.

The new Personality of the Year, Jann Johnson deserves roses from all of us. Although the only paid employee of the Northern Rodeo Association, she continually puts in those extra hours, those extra touches including a lot of important public relations work, that make this association the biggest and best in Montana. Help her to continue to do her job, thereby promoting this association and the rodeos it approves.

We begin our sixth year of editing the NRA Newsletter with renewed dedication and enthusiasm and ask that you help us help you by keeping us informed.

Please note this one item about the 1984 NRA Finals: it has been scheduled for the SECOND weekend in February of 1985 rather than the first. Ranchers who annually trek to Billings may want to delay their calving season in 1985 to compensate for the unforseen scheduling change.

Keep that news coming to us!

Jottings From Jann

Those of you who received a gift certificate from Bailey Hat Company, please get them into the office as soon as possible as they need to be ordered immediately from Bailey before the stock is depleted.

Third place winners receive Morgan Miller Boots, please write your size on the gift certificate and enclose your current mailing address (if different from what I have in the office) and send them into me. They will be forwarded on to the company and the company will mail your boots directly to you.

A big THANK YOU to all who helped with the cocktail party. We sincerely appreciated all that you did! Hats off to: Lucille Small, Irene Glasgow, Bert Roberts, Sylvia Gusick, Rosemary Keenan, Alice Glasgow, Gaye Fisher, Marcy Weisser. You ladies did an excellent job. Thank you for your support.

Thank you's also to Connie Weiss, Debbie McCormick and Helen Dupea for their help at the cocktail party and banquet.

ATTENTION COMMITTEES: Please send in your sanctions as soon as possible. We have had many requests for rodeo dates from various chambers of commerce, states and tourism publications. We need those dates!

THANKS

I am really, truly at a loss for words to express how honored I am that you voted me "Personality of the Year." I am really touched.

A Genuine Western Classic

Few dispute the surge of pride Montanans feel toward their country. Stir the hearts of these Montanans with a patriotic display, and you create a unique, contagious enthusiasm.

The sight of Old Glory being ushered into the arena by a striking native American girl on a high stepping white horse, complemented by the sounds of the most beautiful song in America rendered by an innocent young child, brought record METRA crowds to their feet to enthusiastically receive the smooth running rodeo to follow — the 1983 NRA Finals.

Dee Biegler brings Old Glory into the arena.

Some 18,000 people shelled out over $90,000 to watch the top ten cowboys and cowgirls compete for $40,000 in total prize money, pitting their skills against the top stock of five Montana stock contractors. Each go-around saw leads change hands, championships at stake and record scores set. And the crowds thronged to the METRA in Billings the first weekend in February in ideal spring-like weather to energetically cheer on the competitors.

Danny Cross skillfully added to his 1983 earnings during the Finals to capture the 1983 all-around cowboy crown with a record $11,459.90 in NRA earnings. Last year's all-around cowgirl, Lisa Scheffer, entered the Finals $1,825.91 behind leader Cinde Barthelmess, and roped and barrel raced her way to a second all-around cowgirl title by winning $2,600 at this one rodeo alone, boosting her winnings to $10,069.71, a mere $24.09 ahead of runner-up Cinde.

Jim Walker came into the finals with a $753.08 lead in the saddle bronc riding over former champion Don Malli, and, although he rode all three horses, he placed in only one goaround. Malli, on the other hand, came to the Finals to win, and he placed in two go-arounds to tie for first place in the average, but could only come within $38 of Walker who went back to Lovell, Wyo. with the championship saddle. Butch Reynolds of Corvallis tied with Malli for the average. Kail Mantle was named saddle bronc Rookie of the Year.

Tracy Mikes broke the METRA record in the bareback riding with an 83 marked on Carpenter's "Hermie's Worm," who was also named Bareback Horse of the Year, on Friday night. Mikes failed to score on his next two horses, however, and Colin Murnion maintained his lead and won the saddle, placing second in all three go-arounds and the average. Mike Lenning was the Finals average winner, with consistent performances, placing fourth in two go-rounds and first in the last go-round. Kevin Kessler of Kearney, Neb., or Belle Fourche, S.D., or Cody, Wyo., or Miles City, Mont., won the Rookie of the Year honors in the bareback riding.

There was nothing boring about the bull riding. Former champ Jim Leatherberry came into the Finals $491.06 ahead of Big Timber's Joel Warneke, son of Rick and Nancy Warneke, was the hit of the finals with his rendition of the national anthem. George Morris, left, played John Wayne's part.

Scott Breding, the 1982 National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association bull riding champion. Breding used his skill, tenacity, strong young body, and confidence in himself to place in two go-rounds, win the average, and be one of only two cowboys to cover two bulls during the three performance rodeo, to snatch the 1983 bull riding crown out of Leatherberry's grasp. The pride of Big Timber remains the pride of his home town.

Seems as though the steer wrestlers always wait until the last minute to put on stellar performances and keep the audience in suspense with the lead in jeopardy all the time. The heat was on after the first go-round when Rod Lyman hit the dirt and failed to throw his steer. Big Rod showed 'em how the second go-round with a winning 3.99 time, and his closest competition, Bill Davis, failed to throw his steer. Lyman placed second in the third go-around to clinch the 1983 championship, defending his title. Soft-spoken Rodger "Skeeter" Nordahl, however, had three good, consistent runs, placed in two go-rounds, winning the third, and emerged as the Finals average winner. He moved from sixth to fourth place in the year-end standings. Danny Cross won enough at the Finals to move up from fourth place in the standings to second.

Calf roping Rookie of the Year, Kyle Kosoff of Ogden, Utah, placed in all three go-rounds and won the average at the Finals to pull up from fourth place to second place in the standings. He remained well behind leader Mike Barthelmess, however, and Mike took home his second consecutive calf roping title. Britt Givens, more commonly known as a champion bull rider, took home second in the calf roping

NRA rodeo fans from throughout Montana are familiar with a "Huffnluman." It is an expert display of team roping by Glen Hough and Phil Luman. They won their first team roping championship in the NRA in 1972 and have been familiar faces at NRA rodeos ever since. always a threat with their wicked ropes.

This year they entered the finals as partners, even though Hough was $145.93 ahead of Luman in the standings. They placed in two go-arounds, and won second in the average, and Glen Hough was crowned team roping champion another year. Their time of 7.38 in the third and final go-around was the fastest of

Continued From Previous Page the rodeo, and brought cheers from the crowd as they had just witnessed another, "Huffnluman." Ironically, the two did not rope together in 1982, and Hough hadn't won enough during the year to qualify for the 1982 finals. The two school teachers put their minds to it in 1983, and their roping skills paid off. Glen Hough has won the NRA team roping champship, sometimes with Phil and sometimes without him, 11 times. A remarkable record for a remarkable pair.

Now the ladies' events. The times were fast and furious in the barrel racing, and the girls ran with reckless abandon in their quest for the big prize money up in their event. This was evident with the number of tipped barrels which all but put a contestant out of the average. Vivian Mefford won two go-rounds, one with the fast time of the rodeo, but knocked over a barrel in the second go-around to keep her out of contention for any average money. The two leaders, Cinde Barthelmess and Lisa Scheffer, ran good, consistent patterns and Lisa's old horse, "Sorrely" proved too rapid for Cinde's "Speedy," and Lisa took home the Finals average above second place Cinde, along with $1600 in barrel racing earnings to pull within about $1,000 of Cinde's year-end earnings, not enough for the saddle.

The breakaway roping was another story. Kayleen Chaffee knew her neck was on the line coming into the rodeo with seasoned breakaway ropers breathing down her neck. Unfortunately, the pressure got to her, she failed to place in any of the three go-arounds, and was overtaken for the year-end championship by former champion Janie Carlson. Janie, nonetheless, had Shari Schall breathing down her neck, and when the dust settled, Shari was in second place for the year by only $40.10. Shari failed to place in the third go-around, breaking the barrier on top of superb 2.71, and Janie retained the lead and the championship. Shari won the Finals average, and Kayleen was pushed down to third place. Cinde Barthelmess failed to place in any of the go-arounds, but Lisa Scheffer won first in the first go, and second in the third to place third in the average, adding another $1,000 to her 1983 rodeo winnings, to pull ahead of Cinde in the all-around race by only $24.09.

There were a lot of people to thank in the success of the 1983 NRA Finals, including the weather man, who provided the best weather ever for the best mid-winter rodeo in the state of Montana. Promoters and managers George Runquist and Bob Teaff deserve a lot of praise for all their expertise and hard work in developing this rodeo into what it has become; the officers and directors for the leadership, and of course the many cowboys and cowgirls who go down the road all summer, vying for a chance to compete at this, the biggest and the best, all deserve a pat on the back.

It is not time to rest on our laurels, however. "People who rest on their laurels are wearing them in the wrong place," the adage goes. More hard work, more miles traveled, and more chewed off fingernails will be required to make next year's rodeo season and NRA Finals keep up the fine tradition that has been established!

Found in the "Agri-News," Feb. 17 issue, a portion of the "Country Living" column by Crick.

It's funny how you can get up easier and feed faster when there is someplace to go. K.T. and Corky fed in jig time. We picked up Scot and were on our way to the Northern Rodeo Finals at the Metra. For once we were even on time.

Corky decided we should take the grandkids, even two-year-old Shane. He was a pleasure, never missed a thing from the word go. Much to his mother's dismay, he calls horses "a moo." There were 12 of us in our bunch and I'm sure Shane saw the most.

Being rodeo-oriented, we can't count the grand entries we have seen, but the Finals on Sunday was the most breath-taking, heartwarming one yet. We sat so high in the Metra the air was thin, but the view was out of this world.

The different flags, lights, horses, and a small talented boy made 7,000 spectators so quiet you could hear a pin drop.

After the recording of John Wayne talking about the flag, our country and the spectacular performance of the horses and flags, the announcer asked everyone to join that little seven-year-old boy sing the Star Spangled Banner.

That little guy stood out in that big arena all alone with spotlights on him and without any backup music he held the audience in complete awe.

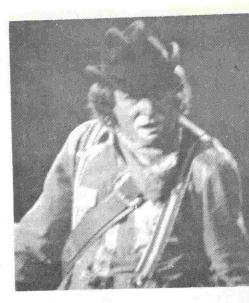

That is one time a pint-sized cowboy held the bulls, broncs and adults in a second place status. He had stolen the show before it even began. After the roar of the applause quieted down I heard one of my girls say, "guess I can quit crying now."

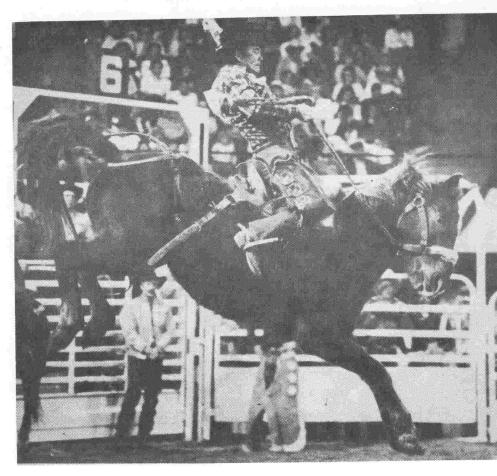

That little person had set the pace and down to the last bucking bull coming out of the chute the Finals was a genuine Western classic.

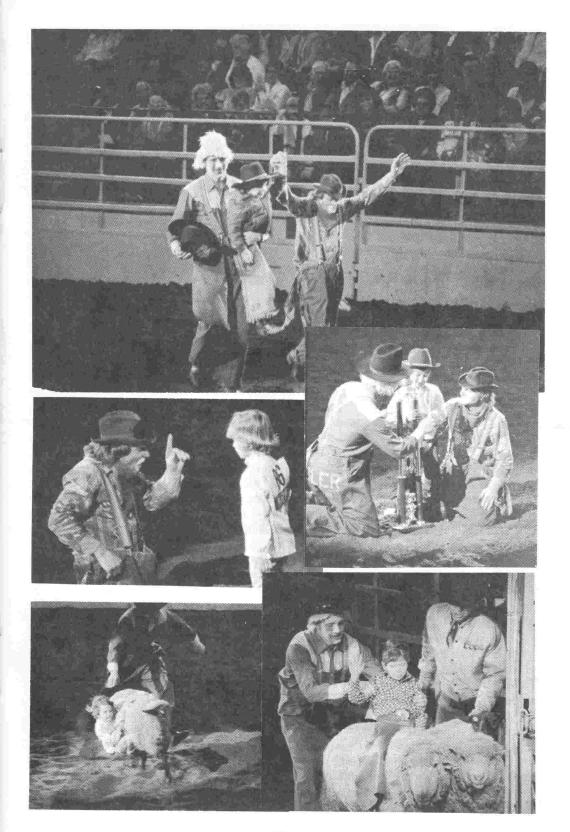

1983 NRA Finals

Ernie Marshall, right, of Balzac, Alta., Canada, entertained the crowds at the NRA Finals for the second consecutive year. His "making Kevin disappear" act in the outhouse was one of the bigger hits of the rodeo, but his other antics, such as his nightly wrestling match with the "Tasmanian Devil," were also big hits. Below, John Pinkerton of Melstone performs on Grebe's Good Eye during the finals. On the facing pages are scenes from the sheep riding event, always a popular event with the crowds. Kevin Hill assisted in the pick-up man duties. The top picture features Joel Warneke, the overall winner of the sheep riding, and below and to the right is Will Stovall, Saturday night's winner.

Bonding of stock contractors and rodeo secretaries was thoroughly discussed. The bonding will be researched and information brought back to the Board of Directors at the March meeting.

Todd Sanders has applied for membership in the NRA as a stock contractor. The Board feels the NRA requires additional information before making a decision. It was requested that Mr. Sanders attend the March meeting and the membership will be addressed at that time.

An awards committee needs to be set up to go over all bids for 1984 buckles and 1985 saddles. The committee will consist of Mark Norem, Lois Hill, Ed Waldhauser, Ed

Miller, Kent Mosher, and Glen Hough.

Junior awards program and junior events were discussed. A possible minimum entry fee of $10 per event was addressed. The Junior awards and Junior events will be brought up at the March meeting. Tabled.

The letter which was requested by the Board to be sent to all stock contractors, secretaries and committees was made available for the Board signature.

Glen Hough moved the meeting be adjourned, Danny Cross seconded. Adjourned.

Lord Calvert Program Outlined

Canadian Lord Calvert is very pleased with its expanded rodeo involvement as an Official Sponsor of the Northern Rodeo Association for 1984 as announced at the recent NRA Finals by Fred Ronai, Senior National Products Manager of Calverts Distillers.

Highlights of the 1984 CLC sponsorship program for the NRA include:

1. $4,950 in direct cash awards to contestants, stock contractors and announcers at eleven selected rodeos.

2. $700 in cash and awards to stock contractors for top year end and top finals bucking stock with CLC names.

3. Direct support advertising for rodeo committees with posters, banners, program covers and press releases.

4. Support advertising for the NRA through billboards, magazine advertising and displays at point of sale locations.

5. Buckles for the Finals champions.

6. Trophies for the year-end All-Around Cowboy and All-Around Cowgirl.

The eleven rodeos for the 1984 season, to be announced at a later date, are being selected on the basis of contestant entries, marketing area, and distribution among stock contractors.

At each of the eleven rodeos, $40.00 will be awarded for the best time or score during a paid performance for the CLC events of that day. Money will be awarded in all eight adult events, with equal money for team ropers, during the course of each selected CLC rodeo. For example: When stock is drawn for the first performance of a two performance rodeo, the judge will also draw four CLC events for the first performance. Those contestants with the best time or score in those events during the first performance will each win $40.00. The remaining four events will be the CLC events for the second performance with $40.00 awarded to those contestants with the best time or score during the second performance. This format, similar to day money, will give more NRA members a chance at the Canadian Lord Calvert Cash, and the CLC Cash will be directly awarded as soon as the winners are determined.

Cash awards will also be given to the stock contractor and announcer at the selected rodeos in recognition of their involvement and support of the CLC program.

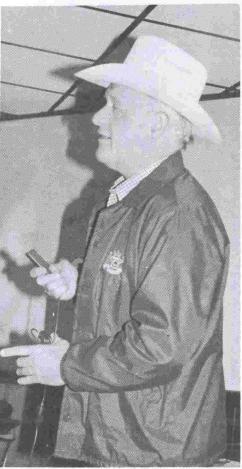

Canadian Lord Calvert takes pride in its grass roots approach to rodeo sponsorship. My duties as the CLC rodeo consultant for Montana will include publicizing and directly coordinating the CLC program among committees, stock contractors and members of the NRA. I will also be on hand at all CLC selected rodeos to personally award the CLC Cash.

Additional information on Canadian Lord Calvert's sponsorship will be publicized as details are finalized.

Best wishes to all NRA members for a successful 1984 season.

> Jim Beeman Rodeo Consultant Canadian Lord Calvert

Fred Ronai, Senior National Products Manager of Calverts Distillers, presents a slide presentation during the general membership meeting explaining the role Canadian Lord Calvert will play in the Northern Rodeo Association. The New York City executive was treated to typical Montana hospitality during his stay in Billings and has promised to return. Calverts will be represented in Montana by Jim Beeman of Absarokee.

The college kids started off their spring season with a bang at an indoor rodeo at Kalispell on Feb. 18, 19. All-around honors were taken home by NRA members Clint Branger and Tara Olsen.

Everyone is reminded that the 1984 NRA Finals will be held the SECOND week of February in 1985. Please keep this in mind when arranging your vacation time, calving, lambing, etc.

Everyone involved with the NRA awards banquet held Sunday night after the finals is to be congratulated. The awards presentations went smoothly, everyone stayed relatively sober throughout, the dance was great — and that food — wasn't that something!

Dale Small reports that two of his top bulls, "Chicken George" and "Wild Blue Yonder," succumbed in the bitter cold weather experienced in mid-December.

Ken and Barbara Hendrix announce that a new baby will join sister Whitney, age 15 months, the middle of August.

Merrill Miller is in St. Vincent's Hospital in Billings. Get well soon! We're thinking about

THANKS

When a man gets to feeling low, it's hard to stay there when you have friends like you.

The money you all donated to me and my family is more than we deserve. You are a special bunch of people and I'm glad you're all my friends. Thank you always.

P.S. Thanks to Steve O'Hern for passing the hat.

THANKS

To the Northern Rodeo Association;

Thanks for the saddle and regional buckle I received. I'm highly honored to have these things. Also I would like to thank you all for the free membership gift for winning the college regional bull riding last spring. It's a little late, but I never forgot it. Thanks also for a great year in this association.

Scott Breding

THANK YOU

I would like to extend my gratitude to all NRA/MRA members, for their sportsmanship and all-around courtesy shown at the finals. Compliments were extended by spectators and rodeo members throughout the year.

I especially would like to thank the bullriders for their confidence in my ability to do the job. Also a nice thank you for the buckle. It is a honor that has given me a renewed desire to strive and improve.

I would also like to take the opportunity to thank the people with the "thankless" jobs; Mr. Bob Teaff, Mr. George Runquist and Mr. C.R. Leverett of Furniture Outlet for their time and effort spent on the promotional end. The board members for the extra time spent taking care of the little things we are never bothered with. The list could go on and one.

Last but not least, I think we should all thank Jann Johnson. Jann seems to always smile, put up with all the bull and literally work her butt off.

To me, the dollars we receive for the jobs done keeps us above water, what keeps the inspirational drive going is a nice word of mouth "Thank You."

Thanks again to one and all.

ARENA DUST

Dave Trimmer and Bob Zellar of the Billings Gazette were named media people of the year this year during the NRA Awards banquet.

Mike Collins and wife, Elaine, were seen toting around a new little Collins, kid, Christin, during the Finals. The new addition to Philipsburg and the Collins family is welcomed.

Willard Moore has set the dates for his World Championship Breakaway Roping for June 24 and 25 at his ranch near Columbus. The roping annually attracts the best lady ropers from around the country, fresh cattle, a well-run event, and usually pretty good weather. The dates fall on a Sunday and a Monday, the two days following the College National Finals.

Next newsletter will, hopefully, contain a tentative rodeo schedule. Committees and stock contractors are asked to get things firmed up so these enthusiastic cowboys and cowgirls can start making plans to hit the road.

Pickup man Dick Lyman underwent extensive surgery in January and faces more at a later date. To help him and his family out financially, a big benefit was held in his honor in Great Falls recently, and a benefit fund has also been set up to help him through this crisis. For those who would like to, send donations to: Dick Lyman Fund, c/o Montana Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 5027, Great Falls, Mont. 59403. It's hard to believe that a big, athletic person like Dick Lyman could get so sick, but he did, and certainly all the rodeo people who know him will be glad to help him out. Get well soon, Dick.

Northern Rodeo Assoc. History

The past years of the world's largest regional rodeo association have not always glittered with success. The history of the Northern Rodeo Association, formerly known as the North Central Montana Rodeo Association, finds its roots in the north central portion of Montana where rodeo has always been king—on those wide open prairies of Montana where the rodeo events evolved from the every day life of the ranchers.

Sometime in 1952, several ranch cowboys living in the small community of Roy, near Lewistown, decided they would get together on Sundays, go to the mountains, and cut posts, swipe snow fence, and build an arena. Other little towns like Winifred and Winnett had arenas then, and others like Geraldine, Judith Gap, Harlowton, Belt, Stanford and Lewistown. What do you do when your rodeo dates conflict with someone else's rodeo dates? You call the Rodeo Association and find out what dates are open. And what if there is no Association? Then you start your own.

And that's exactly what the boys from Roy did. They gathered about 36 people from all the surrounding towns that put on rodeos, elected officers and tried to decide what to call themselves. There were several names suggested and a lot of arguing. Finally one committeeman from Winifred said in disgust, "Well, if you can't decide on a good name, let's at least have a descriptive name." He continued, "Let's call ourselves the North Central Montana Rodeo Association."

Little did they know in those early days that the little association, whose name started out as a joke, would develop into the most powerful rodeo organization in the northwest.

For some reason, and no one really knows why, the association faced some insurmountable problems, and sometime during 1957 the organization fell apart and the NCMRA ceased to exist.

Where there are cowboys there are bound to be rodeos. Where there are rodeos there are bound to be problems, problems only an association can handle. Such was the case when several cowboys from the Great Falls area were having a friendly drink together in the early fall of 1959. It was mentioned that the judging at several of the surrounding rodeos was very poor, rodeos were doubling up on dates, and rodeo simply needed some standardization. The first organizational meeting was held Nov. 29, 1959. The problem of a name again came up and the decision that finally resulted was that the old familiar NCMRAwould be used.

Nine rodeos were approved that first year, 91 members, and an end-of-the-year financial report of $94.35.

This was the beginning. There were years when the association moved ahead, some when it moved back, depending on the interest, dedication and talent of the officers involved.

In 1969 the organization ended the year with a little less than 300 members and a bank account showing $281 in the red. That was the last bad year the association had.

1970 appears to be the turning point. It was about this time that a "new" kind of cowboy began to emerge ... they've often been called the "new breed." These are the cowboys coming out of the ranks of high school and college rodeo, cowboys who had an education and who could see the possibilities of rodeo as a career ... a business. Slowly but surely the officers and directors of the organization made a transition and became a serious-minded business group. They injected a certain professionalism into the association which was reflected in the improvement of the quality of rodeos.

The organization grew and soon there was need for a full time employee to take care of it then an office etc., etc.

The name was changed in the fall of 1972 to reflect the all-encompassing nature of the rodeo association — the Northern Rodeo Association, for rodeos approved by the association were far out of the north central area of Montana that those plodding pioneers had known.

Lewistown, Montana, the geographical heart of the state, was known as the association's headquarters for many years. The newsletter of the association traditionally was edited and put out by the secretary, or the full-time employee. Coming out of the association's headquarters in Lewistown, it carried all the important and vital information for the cowboys. In 1975, the board of directors voted to make "The Chute Gate" published by Tom Alderson in Wyoming, the official publication of the Northern Rodeo Association.

During this time the offices of the association were moved around from Lewistown to Belt to?, and finally to Billings. Not only did the publication originating from Wyoming falter and die, the association slumped somewhat, mostly from lack of a strong individual to manage and direct the association's activities from the office as the full-time employee.

In 1975 the organization reached some stability, and this was when the association headquarters moved to Billings. An organization, unfortunately, apparently needs a few bad years to get its feet back on the ground and face reality, but in the past eight years or so, reality has meant that the Northern Rodeo Association is at the forefront of regional rodeo in the United States today. It approves over 40 rodeos a year, pays out well over a half million dollars in prize money, and boasts some 1300 members and numerous proud supporters.

After the move to Billings, the official publication came out of the headquarters and carried all the important news once again. In the fall of 1978 the present publication, the NRA News, was started, printed in Choteau, Mont. by volunteer editors, with strong collaboration and cooperation from the main office in Bil-

After the last rodeo of the season, usually Labor Day weekend, the boys would sit around and discuss the possibilities of having a finals rodeo, one which would add substantially to the year-end winnings and really culminate the rodeo season.

In the fall of 1973 the first NRA Finals became a reality. This one was held in the Rocklitz Indoor Arena at Glendive in late September. The next, 1974, the Finals moved to MSU's Brick Breeden Field House at Bozeman, and then in 1975 the first NRA Finals was held at the METRA in Billings. In 1976 George Runquist began his association with the NRA, and the best became even greater. From its shaky beginnings in Glendive, the NRA Finals has grown into the largest grossing rodeo in the state, and annually attracts the biggest crowds to watch the best cowboys and cowgirls in Montana.

The membership of the NRA includes businessmen, ranchers, housewives, teachers, doctors, lawyers, veterinarians, and people from all walks of life who like to spend their weekends at a rodeo somewhere close to home, and of course Montana is best.

In 1982 the NRA signed a working agreement with the historic and colorful Montana Rodeo Association, whose approved rodeos were generally west of the Continental Divide. This natural barrier in Montana, the Rocky Mountains, has proven to be not a barrier at all, and many cowboys and cowgirls were paying dues in the MRA in order to compete at their top rodeos. The idea of a working agreement was bantied about for several years before someone enlisted the aid of a lawyer to aid in a working agreement between the two corporations.

Again, the problem of a name came up. No one wanted to drop the name of their own association, and each had a unique history and many memories in their long and colorful past. Both names were used. Cowboys only imagined that the name NCMRA was long and complicated. Try to convince the Associated Press to use rodeo results and standings when the name is "The Northern Rodeo Association and the Montana Rodeo Association."

Beginning with the 1984 rodeo season, only one name will be used, the Northern Rodeo Association. Although the complete scope of the association is probably best described with "MONTANA," it took a lawyer to determine what the name would be.

The association exists with two regions, an east and a west region. The west region encompasses all the rodeos which have traditionally been MRA rodeos, and the east region the NRA rodeos. This gives cowboys and cowgirls the chance to win a buckle or a title without have to travel long miles, and at the same time, those competitors who wish to hit the road hard, and make three or four rodeos a weekend, can do so with the hope of winning one of those beautiful year-end championship award saddles.

With offices in Billings, Mont., one full-time employee and a host of dedicated officers with business-like approaches to the greatest spectator sport in America, the Northern Rodeo Association will continue to breed success. And one reason for this success can be seen by simply watching an NRA rodeo ... great family entertainment ... the kind that brings fans back again and again.
